

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA, 1755
AMERICAN COLONIAL WARS
The Battle of Monongahela,
9 July 1755

French and Indians

Militia fled at first contact.

Actually a meeting engagement. Advance Guard fell back on main body, which advanced to support it. Braddock had adequate all-around close-in protection but lacked distant reconnaissance.

Part of main body escape.

(Advance Guard)

(Flank Guard)

(Main Body)

(Rear Guard)

Rear Guard took cover, held ground, and finally escaped.

To Fort Duquesne (8 miles)
