The only vegetation shown in the Brixner Forest, because of its tactical importance.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.

Lannes' Provisional Corps, formed on 19-20 April, consisted of two infantry divisions from Davout's corps plus two cavalry divisions — a total strength of approximately 25,000. This change in task organization left Davout with 24,000 men under his command.

Charles gradually shifted his forces opposing Davout from west to east during the period 20-22 April. The exact traces of these moves are not shown.